Sasquatch Books, an independent publishing company in Seattle, is seeking an Editor-at-Large to help the press develop new projects for its Little Bigfoot children's imprint.

Little Bigfoot publishes picture books for ages 1 to 8, fiction and nonfiction. The stories and topics tend to be regional with connections to the Pacific Northwest and to Alaska but a number of books have a national audience as well.

This is a freelance book-acquisition position. The Editor-at-Large serves as a talent scout with developmental editorial skill to help an author prepare a manuscript for successful submission to the Little Bigfoot acquisition committee. The Editor-at-Large is also tasked with pairing the right illustrator with acquired manuscripts. The Editor-at-Large will be compensated with a fee at the time a book is acquired.

All contract negotiations with authors and illustrators will be handled by Sasquatch personnel. Once a project is under contract, the author will work with a Little Bigfoot editor to execute all remaining editorial and design work.

This is an opportunity for someone who is engaged with the children's writing world in the Pacific Northwest to connect that passion to the business of publishing.

Please send letter of interest and resume to jobs@sasquatchbooks.com.
